

ABSTRACT

[0080] The invention relates to a device comprising at least two containers configured in such a manner as to be superposable on a stacking axis, and at least one hinge interconnecting the two containers and enabling one of the containers to be pivoted relative to the other(s), at least partially, about an axis of rotation that is not parallel to the stacking axis, each container defining a housing.